Slides: SCC Meeting Agenda 17th of October
Date: Oct 17, 2026

Minutes taken by nikthechampiongr (275243748177477632)
Meeting chaired by mazziebot (756628045762134192)

VeritableCalamity Attendance

Mqole confirmed that VeritableCalamity was unable to attend this meeting due to real life commitments. The vote for the timing of the next meeting has become more crucial in order to allow for Veritable to schedule around it.

Mqole will speak with VeritableCalamity prior to the next meeting in order to clear up ambiguous and contradictory information. To be discussed at the next meeting.

Discussing the Wizden proposal

Statements by Wizard's Den

AugustSun, on behalf of wizden stated that wizden is currently working with the infrastructure team in order to figure out how to organize changes according to their wishes. Legal organization and structure discussions have gone well at a high level. Trello boards in regards to organizational efforts were provided to the SCC. Plans are still being made. The Restoration Team is attempting to find the root causes of the organizational failure wizden experienced. It is aiming to make SS14 open to multiple upstreams, with wizden remaining one of them, references in official material that make wizden seem as the only official upstream will be removed. August has personally been working with the maintainer team in order to better organize them, to allow for their concerns to be better heard as a body, and to allow for them to better focus and prioritize important development issues.

General Proposal Discussion

Mqole supports the engine being independent from the development of Wizard's Den Content. Asked for clarification on how wizden will be disentangled from being the official upstream if the engine still uses Wizden as its build target. Response by wizden deferred for infra team on the next agenda topic.

Trosling asked for clarification on how the Oversight committee established by the proposal will have fork representatives elected. AugustSun responded that the initial proposal was that 3 members would be nominated by wizden staff and elected, 3 members would be selected by downstream communities nominated by wizden staff which will then be responsible for selecting representatives, and 1 position would be elected by the oversight committee itself. The proposal may still be changed after further conversation.

Hivehum asked that in view of favoritism by in wizden leadership towards specific downstreams, how does wizden intend to remedy such favoritism. AugustSun responded that the process for nominating downstreams would rely on the views of the wizard's den staff team as a whole instead of just leadership, which he believes should help deal with favoritism.

Lobsterpaw raised a concern that the scheme proposed for nominating communities for the oversight committee will still lead to certain communities being favored by others. AugustSun responded that this is a valid concern, and that he will be working with the Restoration Team to find a solution that will be able to take into account all downstreams.

Aquif asked how many communities intend to hardfork, and how many intend to remain with wizden as upstream. A conclusive answer was not given, no representatives present expressed any sentiment one way or another.

Ash made the following statement: "Personally; I don't necessarily see it as a huge issue. Obviously we don't want blatant favouritism but having a team with aligned interests if the goal is to serve the entire community at-large I don't mind, and am optimistic regarding the direction and steps taken."

Amatadorro made the following statement: “From what I see from votes and overall, some communities are much more active here in scc and I hope those reps you decide to choose, will be willing to do the job”

Mazziebot asked how wizden is currently attempting to reach out to departed staff. AugustSun stated that this is beyond the restoration team’s responsibilities, but that Wizard’s Den is attempting to reach out to old staff, mend bridges, and address their concerns.

Mqole requested clarification on whether the proposal sets out 3 fundamental bodies, the Wizden Staff Team, the Restoration Team, and the oversight committee, whether the oversight committee is meant to advise over the work of the Restoration team. AugustSun stated that the oversight committee is not intended to advise over the Restoration Team’s work, but to ensure that they regularly check in with their work with the proposal.

Mqole stated that there need to be proper checks and balances in place in order to prevent similar organization failures from happening again. He additionally stated that the Restoration Team’s authority over the staff team is unclear, and appears to be a qualitative executive authority. AugustSun stated that the Restoration Team is mostly meant to act as producers, their job is to accommodate and facilitate the organization of different parts of Wizden.

Mqole asked whether the restoration team is a similar body to the current Wizden Staff Manager team. AugustSun stated that the Restoration team is mainly meant to implement the proposal, not to take over operations in wizden. In regards to similarities with the Staff Manager team, they will have similar organizational aspects to the Staff Manager team, and will help codify policy.

Mqole asked if the scope of the Restoration Team will preclude making changes to the leadership and organizational structure of wizden. AugustSun stated that it will not, but changes will not be done unilaterally by the Restoration Team. They will work with the existing structure and leadership in order to make changes.

Mqole requested clarification on whether the Restoration Team will have executive authority over wizden staff. AugustSun stated that they will not. Mqole stated concerns that the current proposal does not have proper checks and balances in order to deal with misconduct from the Restoration Team, with the oversight committee sounding toothless. The oversight committee additionally relies on wizden for its appointments, and the Restoration Team has been appointed arbitrarily. Mazziebot stated that there is low trust in the current wizden directors which appear to keep executive control. Mqole asked if there have been conversations about these concerns internally within wizden. AugustSun stated that there have been active discussions with staff, and that their opinions are mostly congruent with the selected appointments. On the oversight committee, he stated that their powers and structure are flexible and still up for discussions.

Mqole stated that the previous reorganization effort after the PJB affair happened behind closed doors, without giving enough say for downstreams to provide input. Concluding that the previous organizational efforts could have had a better chance to be successful if they were more open. Augustsun agreed that the previous efforts did not properly account for the needs of downstreams, or even much of the wizden staff team. He stated that this was done due to a need for urgency under the circumstances, which led a lot of things to be missed. Mqole stated that further transparency would be desirable as the proposal is fleshed out. AugustSun responded that the Restoration Team will attempt to be as open as possible.

Aquif asked: “In my eyes, I see Jez et al coming into wizden during the original reorg as a corporate coup of the project. do you have checks in place to prevent bad actors coming in and attempting to take over the project?”. AugustSun stated that there are multiple things being done to alleviate such concerns. One of which are working with the infra team to figure out how they personally wish to organize.

Fancyplanks stated that there was no visibility by the SCC, or to the public in general that there had been structural issues in wizden, or that the current ownership of wizden is again held by a single person. They request that wizden keep transparency in mind with the current efforts. AugustSun stated that wizden is very much attempting to keep transparency in mind, with one of their efforts to that effect being the trello boards shared with the SCC.

Geekyhobo apologized in regards to the lack of transparency, He himself had trouble dealing with the directors in order to transfer the project from his exclusive ownership, stating that the directors were too occupied with infighting. Geeky stated that even after the latest affair, transparency within staff is still much better than it was prior to the PJB affair. He is confident that wizden team are working on transparency.

Princes_Chzblz confirms that the matter of transferring ownership was indeed set aside by directors in order to deal with stability. Due to infighting and the affair with the dismissal vote, it could never have been concluded. Princess expressed regret for having the matter delayed.

Mqole stated that he saw the current upwards trend of transparency to be promising, but also disappointing that it was not better sooner, and requested that it be further prioritized considering the past history of the organization. He stated that there should be a policy on releasing information of private proceedings like the SCC. AugustSun stated that he will bring this request back to wizden for discussion. He stated that wizden is working on allowing for better transparency from the staff team, such as internal development workings by maintainers.

Princess_Chzblz provided an announcement addressed to all staff in regards to Wizden’s PR team duties and responsibilities:

> I return from my break, It was nice to take some time away from the project to relax and just de-stress. That being said I do want to make some immediate changes going forward as I return to the PR team in regards to our procedure. PR is a group of volunteers and I want to respect their time accordingly so I'm going to be adding these conditions to PR policy:

1. PR is under no obligation to make announcements or put in work for other members of the project if they are not properly notified in advance
2. Any announcements made by PR should be scheduled and you should work with PR to schedule them, PR is under no obligation to write or make announcements on unfair or unapproved deadlines
3. PR will never use announcements to shift blame or pressure from one part of the project to another.

fancyplanks sneezed. This has been included in the minutes due to a member's request.

Independent infra organization

Nyx, on behalf of the wizden infra team stated the following: "Devops will be conducting an audit of everything that would be affected by a split within the next few days, so there's no real solid answer for that just yet at this stage. But there will be a document outlining every part of what can be considered "Wizden" right now". Nyx shared a draft proposal for the future of the infra team, the proposal is currently not available for individuals outside the SCC.
Geekyhobo spoke about the proposal on behalf of the infra team and provided a summary: "This proposal is written by Nyx to outline the setup of a Dutch stichting (foundation) to own and run the shared core of SS14. This includes the following: Authentication services, the master server hub, web services, game server management, branding and the keys to everything needed for that (Steam, Github, etc).
A board of 3 to 5 members from the team hold the foundation together, and a lead manages the day to day devops work.

The design goal is simple: no single person can take control of the organization or run away with it without consequences, and the board stays light and out of the way because it is ran by people part of the team.

- The board appoints the lead, and holds the assets. It does not have any major authority outside being able to vote on the lead, and managing the legal side of the organization
- The lead is responsible for leading the devops team, and managing day to day responsibilities as it stands in the current organization too.
- The team (aka all active members of DevOps) nominates board members, and can remove them should a majority vote to do so.

Every key asset will have at least 2 people with administrator level access, and should not be held on personal accounts.

The legal side of this, should it be approved, will have to be turned into statutes by a notary."
Additionally clarified that the new organization will cooperate with wizden on certain shared areas such as hub moderation, however that area and others such as engine management are not yet concluded.

Trosling asked where this push will be organized and coordinated, and how the infra team will deal with recruitment and funding. Geeky stated that organizational matters are still being fleshed out in a different discord where the infra team intends to invite people in the future. The new organization will likely be taking over the patreon, however such matters are yet to be concluded.

Aquif expressed support for the proposal, but requested that individuals outside of wizden be included in the organization's founding, as well as further transparency. They requested that meetings be held with directors, the staff team, and the general community. They additionally expressed support for hub moderation to be brought over to the independent organization. Aquif supported using a fork of the wizden repo as a build target temporarily, and in the future creating a more robust solution that is able to be tested onto many different contents. Geekyhobo stated that he would bring many of the suggestions presented in the meeting to devops to be considered.

On engine matters, nyx stated that a build target had not yet been considered but that the infra team would need certain requirements to be satisfied:

- Must have an active player base
- Must adopt the latest engine versions reasonably quickly
- Must work closely with the engine team

Geeky stated that there will be a transitional period where certain functions will remain shared.

Mqole stated that this proposal, when compared to the restoration proposal, may not synergize well with each other. He stated that many of the concerns downstreams have over wizden are over its current central position, and that the infra proposal may render aspects of the restoration proposal unnecessary while also lifting a lot of weight off wizden. Augustsun stated that the first steps of the restoration team were to discuss with the infra team on what they want to do in the future, and how to lift unnecessary burdens off wizden volunteers. Mqole stated that there needs to be efforts to facilitate more external communications in the infra effort.

Amatadorro asked how long it will take to resolve the current situation and the scope of current reorganization efforts. AugustSun, on behalf of wizden stated that due to the nature of the discussions being had, and the legal issues that will be presented by the current plan it is hard to put a proper timeline on when everything will be resolved. Nyx, on behalf of wizden infra concurred that it is currently not possible to know the score or put a timeline on how long efforts will take as things are still very abstract and uncertain. Both August and Nyx stated that once things are more certain, they intend to publish a timeline. Princess stated that the previous organization took weeks before a timeline was known.

Aquif asked whether there can be external involvement in the infra reorganization process within the next week or two. Nyx responded that it is still in discussion within the infrastructure team, and that he can currently not answer the question without consulting with them, however he believes there will not be an issue.

Slowmode in Chat

Chief_Engineer presented the following:

Slowmode in general

Low priority

Summary: Slowmode was enabled in general to try to balance out voices between people who are highly active in the channel and those who are not as active in the channel. At time of writing it is set to 10 seconds. See reply chain ending around #general

Changes can be made outside of a meeting, but the meeting might be a good way to discuss if it's working and is a good opportunity to check in after trying it for a bit.

Goal: Reach consensus on if it is plausible that slowmode will be able to address the issue. Spread Discourse propaganda.

If it is plausible: reach consensus on if it should be kept and how long it should be set to. Confirm consensus with a vote. Fallback to vote outside of the meeting to determine if it should be kept if a consensus cannot be achieved in the meeting.

If it is improbable: [emote of the discourse logo which could not be brought into the minutes]

Aquif proposed that discord managers be able to raise the slowmode on discord manager discretion when discussion is getting unwieldy. Mazzie proposed that slowmode not be raised any higher than 15 seconds. Additionally they proposed that Discord Managers should space out their messages when slow mode is enabled in order to follow similar restrictions to ordinary members.

Proposals adopted by unanimous consent.

Aquif and Chief_Engineer propose that the SCC set up a Discourse instance. Discussions on important topics would be held on Discourse, but the discord would still be available.

Trosling, on behalf of Starlight, stated that they are neutral on the use of the Discourse forum and that he is personally unfamiliar with the platform.

Falcon asked if off topic channels would still be available on the discord. Aquif responded that they would be. Additionally all discourse threads would be relayed on the discord.

Aquif estimates that efforts to set up a Discourse instance will take 1-2 weeks.

SS14 anticheat resources

Item tabled. To be discussed in an internal thread for now.

Ongoing Votes

Aquif provided a summary of all pending votes.

Nikthechampiongr put forward a proposal to suspend ongoing votes on issuing official statements or positions following what was revealed in the current meeting.
